Assassination attempt on Trump makes him a hero and a winner

The assassination attempt on President Trump makes him a hero. Whether the perpetrator was a "lonely wolf" or not is irrelevant. What is clear is that the election is over and Trump will win.

Introduction

Last night at 18:15 local time in Butler, Pennsylvania, an assassination attempt was made on Donald Trump. The perpetrator hit Donald Trump in the ear. The perpetrator fired five shots before he was killed by a sniper. The perpetrator hit three bystanders, one of whom died and two were seriously injured. Donald Trump is doing well.

Trump reacted well - the Secret Service failed

The moment of the assassination

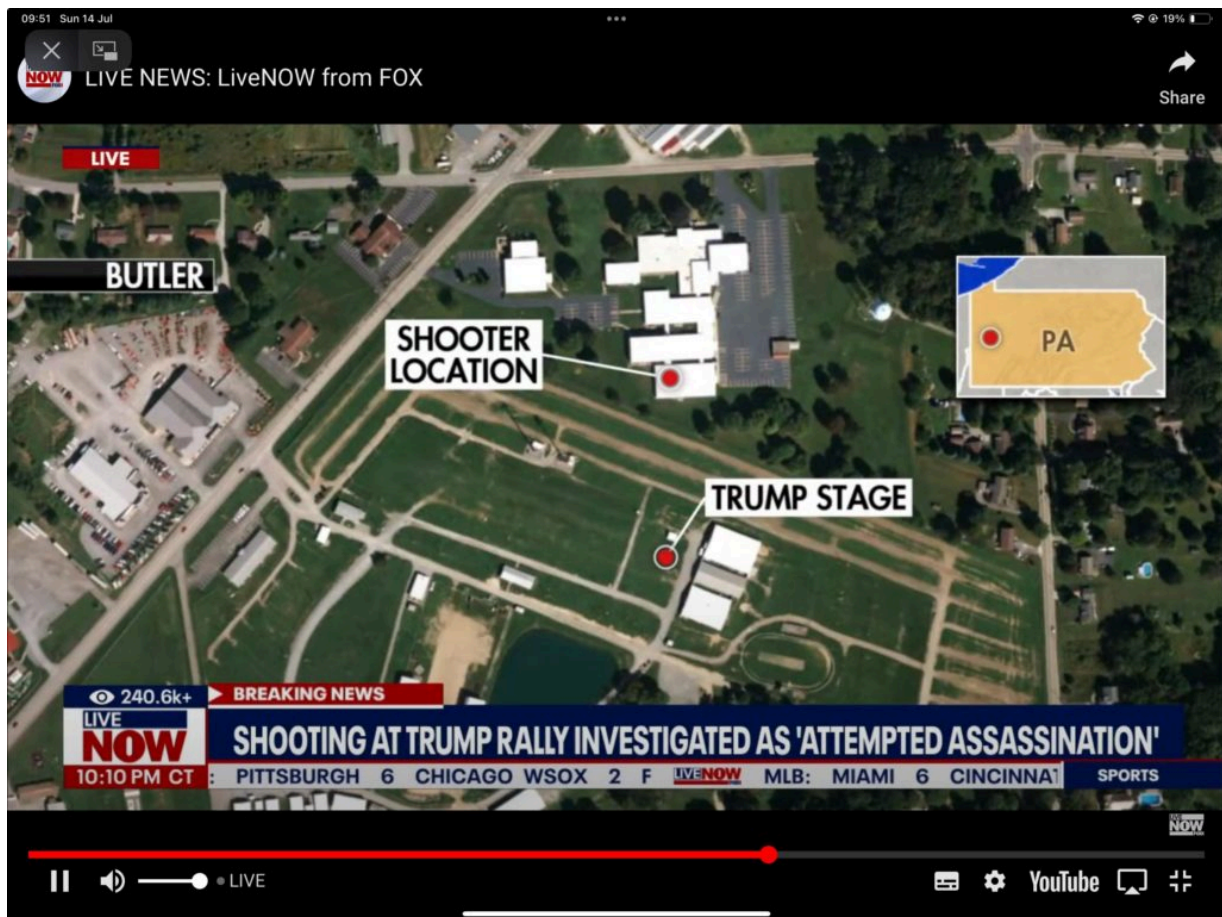

Immediately after the shot, Trump held his ear where he was hit and moved to safety. Only then did the Secret Service rush to him. It is impressive how well Trump reacted - this probably saved his life.

Shooter was seen minutes before the attack - bystanders pointed this out to the police - who did not react.

In an interview with a spectator standing on the sidelines of the event, he said that he saw the assassin with the gun and pointed it out to the police officers standing nearby, but they did not react. The man also found it incomprehensible that there were no security guards on the building in question with a direct view of the podium. The attack could therefore have been prevented.

Lousy shooter

The shooter was 164 yards, 150 meters, away from Donald Trump. That is not a great distance. The shooter was therefore not a professional.

Discussion

Political assassinations have a long tradition in the USA

Four US presidents have been assassinated so far: Abraham Lincoln (1865), James A Garfield (1881), William McKinley (1901) and John F. Kennedy (1963).

Robert Kennedy was killed as a promising presidential candidate in 1968.

It is still unclear who exactly was behind the murder of JFK. What is certain is that it was not Harvey Lee Oswald. He was the scapegoat and it seems clear that JFK was eliminated by the "establishment". He fought the CIA and was against the Vietnam War. That cost him his life.

It is significant that Donald Trump wanted to publish the still-sealed files on Kennedy's assassination shortly before the end of his first term in office, but decided against it after familiarizing himself with the contents.

Judge Napolitano, a journalistic heavyweight in the USA who has known Donald Trump for 40 years and speaks to him regularly, commented on this in an interview on his Judging Freedom channel as follows:

Judge Napolitano: "I told Trump, 'you promised you would release the records of the JFK assassination.' He said to me 'If they showed you what they showed me, you wouldn't have released it either.'"

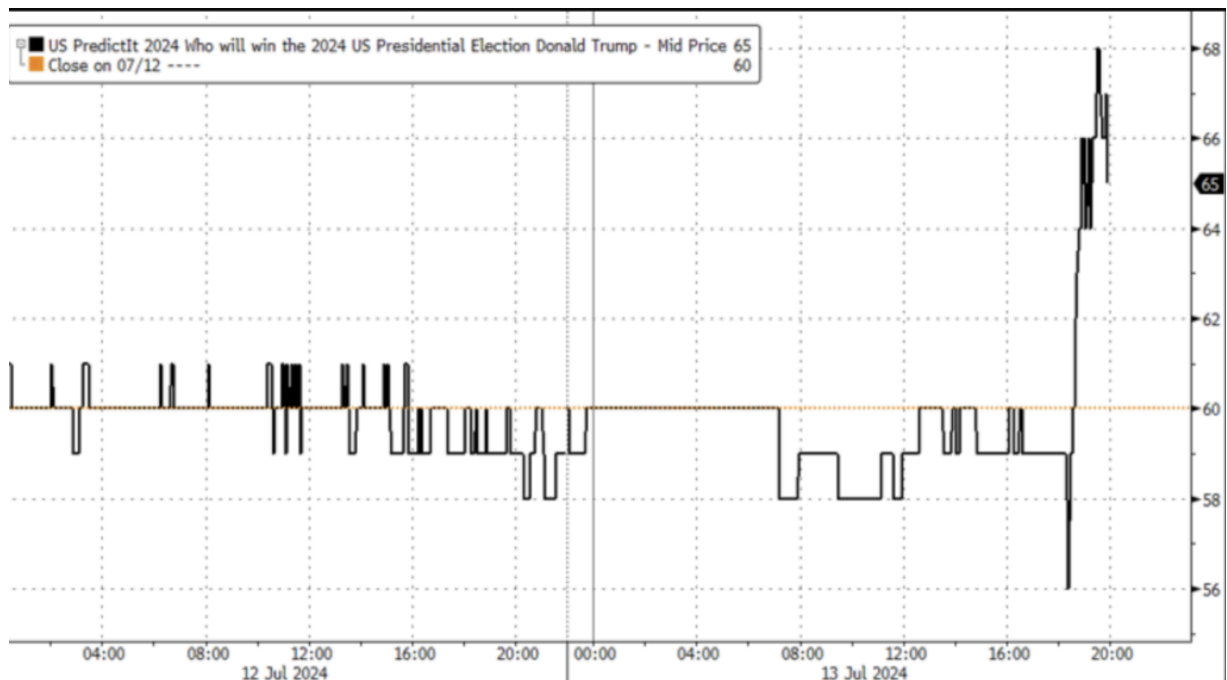

JUDGE NAPOLITANO

It is impossible to say whether the perpetrator who was shot was a madman or not. What is certain, however, is that the assassination of Donald Trump would have been a blessing for his opponents. The Democrats are in complete turmoil with their completely senile president, who even after his pitoyable performances does not want to renounce his candidacy. If Trump had been knocked out, the Democrats could have put up a new candidate and probably had a chance against a "new" Republican candidate.

Trump will become an absolute hero and probably win

His cool and quick reaction - the man is 78 years old - makes Donald Trump an absolute hero,.

The assassination sends his election chances through the roof.

A picture for the history books

Shot Trump raises his fist - A candidate can't look better than this

The richest man in the world will easily finance Trump

Donald Trump's campaign coffers are bulging anyway. Elon Musk pledged his full support for Trump after the attack - and that's saying something.

Conclusion

The attack on Donald Trump has not only failed, but will go down in the history books as a decisive event in the election campaign. Whether the assassin was a mastermind or a patsy is of little importance. Conspiracy theories are sure to emerge today. The fact is that the Deep State routinely intervenes in the history not only of the USA (e.g. Lincoln, JFK), but worldwide (e.g. Iran, Libya, Central America, Iraq). Not always successfully. The fact how well and cool Donald Trump reacted will bring him victory in the USA, the country that loves heroes like no other.

Only one thing is important for humanity: will he bring peace if he survives until his election?
